FREEDOM'S FURY

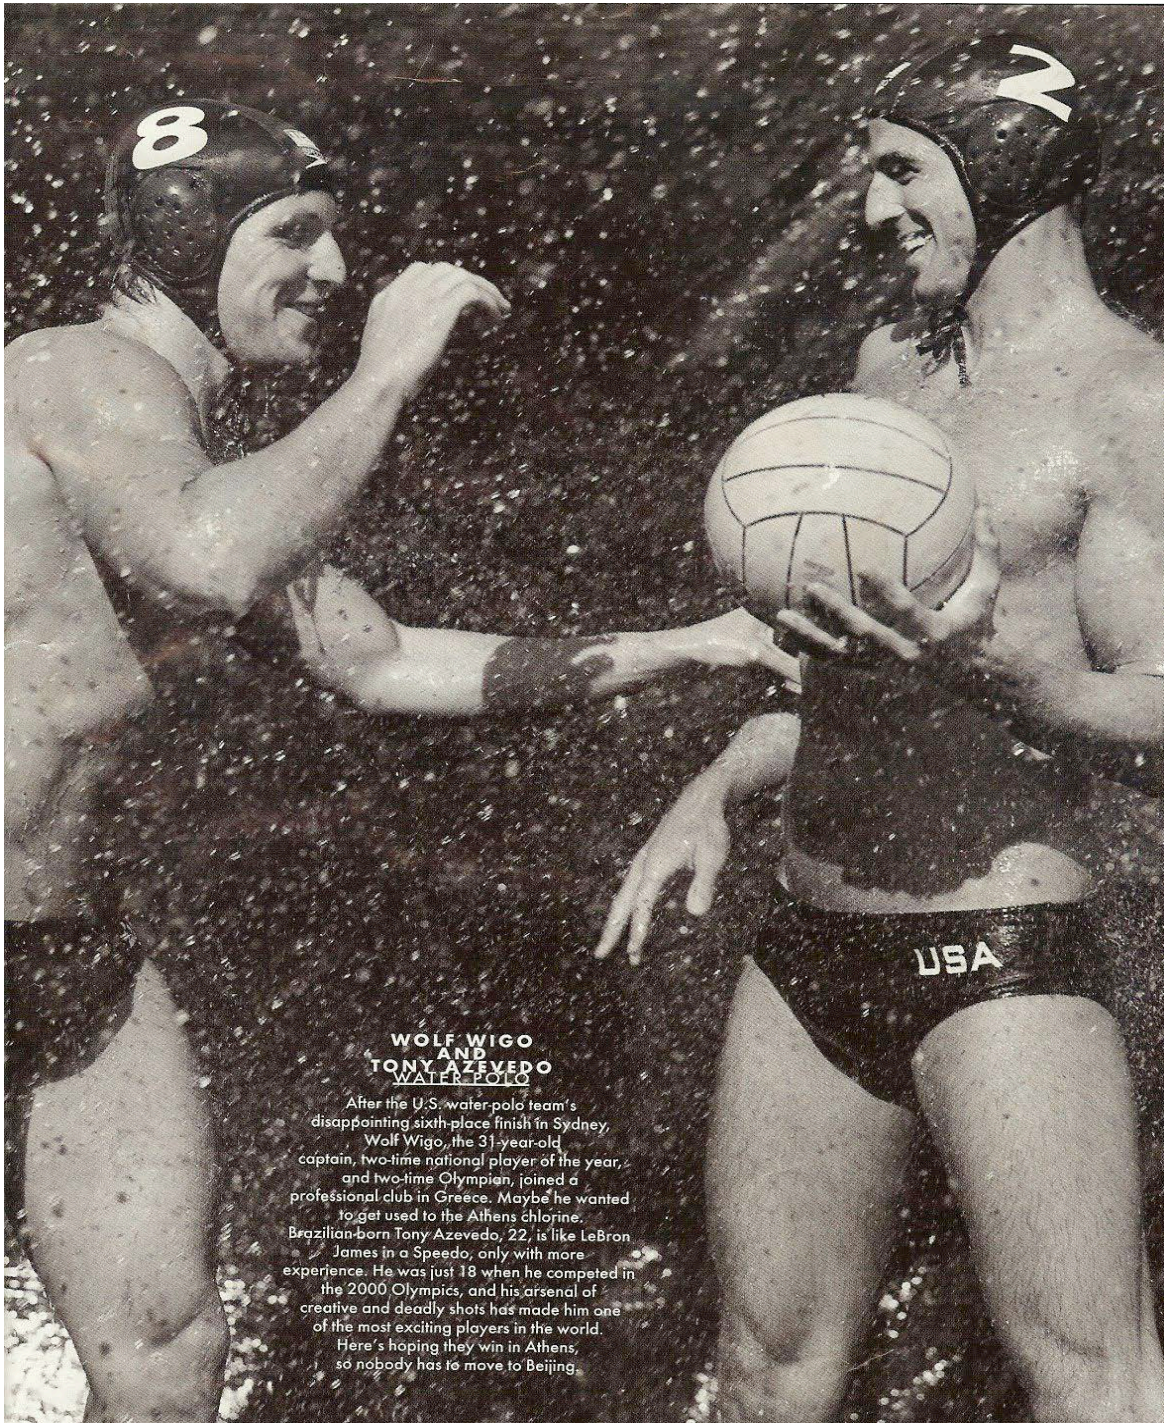

2004 ATHENS OLYMPICS FEATURE

Vanity Fair

June 2004

USA Water Polo Olympians, WOLF WIGO & TONY AZEVEDO are featured in Freedom's Fury during the stylized water polo sequences.

They were photographed (below) as part of Vanity Fair's US Olympic delegation in 2004.

WATER POLO

After the U.S. water polo team's disappointing sixth-place finish in Sydney, Wolf Wigo, the 31-year-old captain, two-time national player of the year, and two-time Olympian, joined a professional club in Greece. Maybe he wanted to get used to the Athens chlorine. Brazilian-born Tony Azevedo, 22, is like LeBron James in a Speedo, only with more experience. He was just 18 when he competed in the 2000 Olympics, and his arsenal of creative and deadly shots has made him one of the most exciting players in the world. Here's hoping they win in Athens, so nobody has to move to Beijing.
